Ralph Kramden is inconsolable over the death of Norton, no matter what Alice and Trixie say to him. He keeps telling Alice and Trixie how much he misses Norton, how tragic a loss it is for him. The twist at the end: it was really Alice who died, causing Ralph to become grief-stricken to the point where he has lost his reason, imagining he's having the conversation with Alice and Trixie, that Alice is still alive, when it is actually Norton and Trixie to whom Ralph is speaking.
